POETRY

We live our inmost lives alone,
At best we are but little known,
And even those who know us best
Have prohed to find within our breast
That secret place, that hidden source
Of life's expression. But of course
They prohe in vain; the life lived there
No mortal soul may with us share.
Deep in the confines of the heart
Where all life's mighty issues start.
There is a hidden sphere unknown
To others. There we live slone.

Alone: Alone: We lose to sale.

Alone! Alone! We long in vain
For sympathy to ease our pain.
For some neart that can understand,
But no! How wisely God has planned
To keep life's centur and its throne
Reserved to Him, and Him alone!
We turn to God, and meeking find
What friends, however good and kind,
Gave not. He understands and foels,
He every bleeding heart wound heals.
The realm we occupy sione
He fills. Our lives to Him are known,
Graco H. Busby, in Zion's Herald.
